He Bore our Sins

It was early November and the leaves from the trees that line the streets lay scattered on the ground. Each household was expected to gather its own leaves into plastic bags for removal by the refuse collectors. That at least was the idea. Now - using the leaves as a symbol of sin - let's see how things worked out.

A few people didn't bother at all. They saw the leaves fall and cover lawn, flower beds, and driveway. There are people for whom there is no such thing as sin. Herod was one of these.

One man swept the leaves off his lawn and driveway out onto the street. Let someone else clean up the mess. He reminds us of those who blame others for their sins. Pilate, the soldiers and the crowd would fit into this category.

Most people took care of their own leaves, but wouldn't dream of taking a leaf off a neighbour's lawn. These stand for the people who accept responsibility for their own sins. Peter is an example.

Finally there was one remarkable man. He not only collected the leaves off his own lawn, but collected leaves off the street also. And he did so quietly and without complaining. He reminds us of a little of Christ, who died for the sins of all what makes Christ unique is the fact that he alone was sinless.

Holy Week is not a week to hide behind other people. We must accept responsibility for our own sins. If we acknowledge our sins we have nothing to fear, for Christ came to take them away. Then we can try to feel at least some responsibility for the sins of our neighbours and of the world in general. No man or woman is an island. Each of us is part of the mainland of humanity.

These will include links to online Stations of the Cross and streamed church services; music ranging from Malcolm Williamson's marvellous Ride On, Ride on in Majesty to Poulenc's sublime Stabat Mater; poems as diverse as Katharine Tynan's All in the April Evening and Mary Oliver's Gethsemane; and much more.
